No Whiskey!

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881.
Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

WHY THE COWS CAME LATE.

Crimson sunset burning
O'er the tree-fringed hills;
Golden are the meadows,
Ruby flashed the rills,
Quiet in the farmhouse,
Home the farmer hies;
But his wife is watching,
Shading anxious eyes,
While she lingers with her pail beside the barnyard gate,
Wondering why her Jenny and the cows come home so late!

Jenny, brown-eyed maiden,
Wandered down the lane;
That was ere the daylight
Had begun to wane.
Deeper grow the shadows;
Circling swallows cheep;
Katydids are calling;
Mists o'er meadows creep,
Still the mother shades her eyes beside the barnyard gate,
And wonders where her Jenny and the cows can be so late!

Loving sounds are falling,
Homeward now at last
Speckle, Bess and Brindle
Through the gate have passed.
Jenny, sweetly blushing,
Jamie, grave and shy,
Take the pails from mother,
Who stands silent by.
Not one word is spoken as that mother shuts the gate,
But now she knows why Jenny and the cows came so late.

A MAN HIDDEN IN MYSTERY.

A POOR BOY'S STREAK OF FORTUNE.

Levi Wilson lives in Uxbridge, a small town in Worcester county, Mass. He is 29 years old. When 19 he was poor. He went away and returned a rich man, and for seven years he has been known as the Uxbridge conundrum. He spends money like a prince. He lives in lavish style. He has built a few houses, but the rents from them would not amount to a hundredth part of his income. He has no business that any one knows of. Where he gets his money no one knows. He has been followed by detectives, but all to no purpose. People have whispered among themselves that he has broken banks, counterfeited coin, and done all sorts of things, but Wilson still pursues his way, seems to enjoy the mystery which he keeps about him and no one can prove that he is anything but honest. When young he worked in stables and in a mill in North Uxbridge. He was too poor to go to school, and had few opportunities to acquire an education. In 1873 he disappeared, leaving behind unpaid bills to D. B. Engley, with whom he boarded, and with whose daughter he subsequently lived as his wife. Now he claims that she was not his wife, and Engley has brought suit claiming $50,000 damages for the seduction of his daughter.

COMING BACK RICH.

Within two years from his disappearance Wilson returned. He said he had been West. His pockets were full of money. He told one man he made it speculating. He told another that a hermit, dying in a wilderness, had given him a patent for a barbed wire fence and that the royalty was something immense. Nobody believed these stories and then inquisitive neighbors began circulating rumors until they had charged Wilson with almost every crime, including gambling and blackmail. They could not discover where he had been. All that they ascertained was that after leaving North Uxbridge Wilson went to Worcester, entered the employment of F. E. Knowles, a wealthy loom manufacturer, as stable boy, and after a year's service went elsewhere. Wilson has since told his old employer that he went to California. More than that nobody knows about the mysterious wanderings which took him from Worcester a poor boy and returned him rolling in riches. After a while the people of Uxbridge township tired of asking him where he got his money and he told them no more funny stories. To-day he is an accepted conundrum, a riddle too curious for any of them to comprehend, a sphinx on the only earthly subject that the townspeople care a fig to hear him talk about. Soon after his return from his mysterious trip Wilson, who had now barely attained his majority, bought some vacant lots in North Uxbridge, not far from the mill where he had tended a cotton loom, and built him a house. Here he lived as the husband of Hattie Engley, who now sues him for $50,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage. At that time everybody in their vicinity believed the couple to be man and wife.

THE EVER REPLENISHED PURSE.

The story of Wilson's operations, particularly during the past four years would fill a volume. He seemed to possess the wonderful touch-stone which turned matter into money whenever he needed it. The practical way of expressing it in Uxbridge was: "He put for Worcester whenever he was hard up for money, and he always came home with heaps of it." Reputable gentlemen say they have seen him show his bank book when on the train from Worcester to Uxbridge, and that it contained credit for deposits of such sums as $40,000, $50,000, and even as high as $60,000. For a country gentleman to be possessed of such a bank account is an exceedingly rare thing. For a man none of whose known investments are bringing him in a penny of income the possession of such wealth is regarded as extraordinary. Until six months ago he kept large bank balances in the Blackstone National Bank in Uxbridge. He had some quarrel with its officers, and withdrawing his money he placed it on deposit in Providence and in the Whitinsville Bank, about three miles from his Uxbridge residence. Two years ago he presented to the Blackstone Bank a check for $3,000, drawn by Mr. Philip D. Moen, of the great wire rolling mill of Washburn & Moen, of Worcester. The officers were in some doubt about cashing a paper for such a large sum and telegraphed Mr. Moen to know if it was all right. The answer came back: "Cash any checks in my name presented by Levi Wilson." This satisfied the officers, and after that there was no hesitation in advancing funds on Mr. Moen's paper to any amount. It has been calculated by his townsmen that for the last three years he has spent at least $100,000 annually. He is said to have been in receit of a monthly income for the last year of $10,000, the source of which, however, has never yet been made known. Up to within a short time ago Wilson owned in Uxbridge real estate valued at $100,000 at the lowest figure. Eight cottages, with their land, and two vacant lots on the east side of the river were valued at $28,000. A new hotel, its furniture, outbuildings, etc., and four tenement houses on the west side of the river, in the heart of Uxbridge village are estimated at about $72,000.

LIVING IN SPLENDOR.

Nobody can understand why Wilson should have erected a hotel in a little country village like Uxbridge. But it was one of his many whims, and he built it in splendid style. Before putting up the hotel he lived in a cottage fitted up like a palace. He had electric bells and finest stables in the State. But the hotel idea struck him and up it went. The carpets are all Brussels and the furniture black walnut. On the second floor Wilson reserved a suite of four rooms for his own private use. He himself has boasted that it cost $10,000 to finish and furnish them. One is finished in pine, another in black walnut, a third in ash and a fourth in mahogany. The gilding on them alone cost $200 and the frescoing $500 more. A private cellar is stocked with the choicest wines and liquors. Here at the hotel Wilson leads a life of luxurious ease, spending money lavishly, telling stories of his expenses that his neighbors have come to regard as tremendous, and seemingly enjoying the atmosphere of mystery in which he dwells. His caprices have cost him many thousands of dollars annually, but his well-spring is apparently inexhaustible. He has another stable at the hotel filled with horses. In one part of this stable, whose appointments are not excelled in the stables of even Bonner and Vanderbilt, Wilson has an office, where he attends to his real estate matters, his rents and some other details, all of which are embodied under the very comprehensive term of "business." Its furniture is in keeping with all of Wilson's magnificent surroundings. As if to mystify still further his neighbors, if such a thing were possible, Wilson, five years ago, went to London and was gone several months. He took with him the woman who has all along been regarded as his wife, and her sister, some years her junior. Money has since then rolled in upon him apparently more rapidly than ever. He has recently invested $60,000 in the Fisherville cotton mill, an enterprise which is hardly yet in operation and yields no income whatever.

WILSON'S ESCAPADES.

Wilson's escapades have been the town-talk for years. Many influential church members feel as if the community had been scandalized by his conduct. When a pious dominie heard of his arrest on the two charges preferred by the Engleys, father and daughter, he lifted up his hands and said, with satisfaction: "At last it seems as if the immoral man is about to get his just deserts." This phase of Wilson's character is really the only one that can be criticised with any degree of justice. Two young women of the place, in addition to the Engley girl, have brought suit for breach of promise to marry, each for $50,000, so it would appear as if the young man was getting into hot water. A few weeks ago Wilson drove through the streets of Uxbridge with a lady whom he intended to marry, so he told a reputable resident. A few days afterward, meeting this gentleman, Wilson remarked in his abrupt way: "I'm not going to marry that girl after all. She has too —— many poor relatives, and I've got enough of them myself." In the matter of poor relatives the man spoke truthfully enough. He has, however, treated them handsomely, purchasing them houses, and even a farm in one instance.

There can no longer be any doubt that Wilson's money comes direct from Philip L. Moen, of Worcester. All the deposits made by him in the Blackstone National Bank were of checks drawn by cashiers of Worcester banks, indorsed by Philip L. Moen and made transferrable to Wilson. On such checks the deposits in this bank alone have amounted to upwards of $200,000. All told, it is estimated that Wilson must have received from this source in the last three years $300,000. Nobody but himself and Mr. Moen know the exact amount. Mr. Moen's intimate friends have wondered at the connection existing between him and Wilson. Mr. Moen owns a third interest in the two great wire mills controlled by the Washburn & Moen Company.

Mr. Washburn declares that he knows nothing of the relations existing between his partner and Wilson. The mystery with the Worcester county people now is not where Wilson's money comes from, but why does it come from where it does?

THE FIRST PAGE OF AN ALMANAC.—Very few people know the signification of the various signs peculiar to the almanac, and some of them are not exactly clear to us.

In the first instance the man who stands in the centre with his vest unbuttoned in such a manner as to expose his alimentary canal, has always been a mystery to us. Why in every almanac for the past century this man, with all his works exposed to the cold night air, should be given the most prominent place in a literary work like the almanac, we are unable to clearly understand. He certainly can claim no great degree of consideration for this act. It does not entitle him to any amount of prominence, for the public do not thirst for a view of a man who has made an autopsy of himself and is apparently proud of it. What the planets have to do with cardiac orifice, we do not at this moment know positively, or why astronomy and the gastric juices should have anything in common.

Again we must come out and confess our ignorance as to the bearing that the ram, or the tarantula, or the twins, or the crab, or other astronomical delirium tremens may have upon the weather. Of course it is stupidity, and we ought to be ashamed of it, but we are in that fix and we cannot help it. When our son gets old enough to look into these things, we will see that he isn't left to grope along through life and make a moral show of himself as his father has.—Boomerang.

HOW THEY PARTED.—A new song is entitled: "How They Parted." We have not read it, but no doubt they parted in the usual way, about 2 A. M., after kissing each other "good-night" at least thirty-seven times. "Well, I guess I must go," he says with a sigh about two hours before he does go. Then after another half-hour's conversation about one thing and another, he presses her hand with much pressiveness, says he really must go, and—lovingly lingers another half-hour. Then he says he didn't know it was so late, picks up his hat and moves toward the door, where he puts his arm around her to prevent her falling in a swoon, and kisses her five minutes in one inning—and still lingers. Then he gives her one more kiss, just for luck, and reluctantly steps down and out into the black, lonesome night, and calls around the next night. That is how they parted years ago—if we have not been misinformed.

"ARE there any fools in this town?" asked a stranger of a newsboy yesterday. "I don't know," replied the boy; "are you lonesome?"

A WATCH WORN BY JESSE JAMES.

HOW IT WAS TAKEN FROM ITS OWNER—ITS RESTORAL.

There was recently on exhibition in St. Louis the watch worn by the late Jesse James for nearly eight years and taken from its former owner, Hon. John A. Burbank, of Richmond, Ind., at Malvern Junction, Ark. After the notorious robber's death the watch was found among his effects and returned to its owner. The story of the robbery as told by Governor Burbank is as follows: "In the spring of 1874 I was going to Hot Springs, Ark. At that time persons going to the Springs left the railroad at Malvern Junction and traveled across the country by stage. We reached Malvern in the morning and left there early in the forenoon. There were fifteen or sixteen persons going over, one lady and the rest gentlemen. Most of the passengers, some ten or twelve, were placed in a six-horse stage coach. I and a gentleman named Taylor, from Connecticut, and a sick man whose name I do not know, were in a hack together, while the lady occupied a third hack by herself. The distance to Hot Springs was about twenty miles. The stage coach led the way, our hack followed and the lady came last. The road was rough and we made rather slow progress, the vehicles being several hundred yards apart. Between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when we were within about five miles of Hot Springs, and just after crossing a little stream where the horses were watered, five men on horseback rode up from the front and passed us to the rear. They were all well mounted, two or three had on long overcoats and perhaps one or two had shotguns, but there was nothing suspicious or remarkable in thier appearance. I thought there might be a shooting of that kind in the neighborhood.

"In a very short time the same men rode back again past our hack to the front. We paid no attention to this. In a few minutes we heard great shouting, cursing, etc., and looking out saw that the coach had been stopped a short distance ahead of us. We drove up as fast as we could, supposing that a Sheriff's posse had stopped the coach to make an arrest or something of that sort.—The coach was stopped while ascending a little hill, and where the road was quite narrow. When we got there we found the coach surrounded by five men on horseback, the same who had passed us, all heavily armed with revolvers leveled at the coach. One had a Winchester rifle and the other four each had a seven-shooter in his hand and two in his belt, making twenty-one shots in sight to each man. When we got up they ordered us all to get out and form in line. I was at the head of the line. As it turned out, there was but one weapon in our party, and this a small pocket pistol. Another was in a hand bag, but was unavailable. When we were in line Jesse James, the captain of the gang, said 'hands up.' We put our hands up.—Then one of the men dismounted, and while the other four kept us covered with their revolvers he went through us. Coming to me first he said 'I'll take what you've got.' Observing my diamond pin, he went for it without any ceremony. While doing that he discovered my watch chain, a very heavy one, which I wore under my vest, and jerking it out threw it out over my head and then pulled out the watch. He then went in my pantaloons pocket and got my pocketbook, containing about $60. The diamond pin was worth from $250 to $300, and the watch and chain $500. All this time we were covered by the revolvers, and being unarmed had no choice but to submit. Our hands were still up. I had on a heavy seal ring, and the fellow said: 'You'd better put your gloves on or I'll take that ring.' I put my hands down long enough to put my gloves on, and he kindly overlooked the ring. When he got through with me he took the next in order, and so on through the line. From my Connecticut friend he got an old-fashioned watch, which was an heirloom in the family, and $500 in money. He offered a big ransom for the watch, but they refused to negotiate.—From the rest they only got small amounts. When they got through with us Jesse James called out to the driver: "Throw down that mail bag.' The driver made no motion at first, and James leveled his pistol at him and said again: 'Throw down that mail bag.'—The driver obeyed. The poach was cut open, the contents poured out on the ground, and the man who was on foot began to fumble over the mail. He first tore open a large official envelope, which had nothing but official papers in it. Seeing there was no money, Jesse James called from his horse, 'Put that letter back,' and the man obeyed without a word. They found no money in the mail and soon stopped opening the letters. They then broke open the express trunk and found two packages of greenbacks, amounting to about $500. All the time the sick man and the lady remained in their seats. When the man who went through us looked inside the hack and reported a sick man, James called out, 'We don't disturb sick men!' and when they came to the lady he said, 'We don't disturb ladies—sit still, madame.' While this was going on one of the mounted men rode round the coach once or twice and examined one of the wheel-horses very closely. It was a fine sorrel horse. After eyeing the horse very closely all over, he called out to the driver, who was still holding the lines, 'Get down and unharness that off horse.'—The driver was slow about moving, and the fellow leveled his pistol at him and said: 'I say, get down and unharness that off horse.' The driver did as he was ordered. When the horse was unharnessed the robber dismounted and, placing his own saddle and bridle on the stage-horse, rode him up the road a few hundred yards and back at a rapid gait.—Coming back to the coach he said: 'You can hitch up that other horse,' and the driver proceeded to do so. That was an Arkansas horse trade. I forgot to say that the man who went through us took a fancy to my fur overcoat, and told me to haul it off, but Jesse James heard him and said: 'No you don't, that would lead to our detection sure.' All this occupied about half an hour. When the robbers got through they told us we could go, and they rode off together. We afterwards heard of them in the direction of Texas. They looked like sturdy young farmers and were not masked besides wearing slouched hats well pulled down, and Jesse James had a woolen comforter around his face. During the entire performance they affected a kind of politeness with all their roughness, and tried to create the impression that they were gentlemanly highwaymen.—After they left we gathered up the mail and scattered baggage and continued on to Hot Springs. The news of the robbery created intense excitement there and the whole population turned out to pursue the robbers, but nothing ever came of it."

Governor Burbank has placed the watch with the Eugene Jaccard jewelry company for exhibition, and it will doubtless be inspected by hundreds of curious ones. A replevin bond had to be given the officers at St. Joseph's, as Mrs. James threatened to sue for its recovery. It is not likely that she will, though. The watch is in perfect running order and shows good treatment from it quondam posessor.

MATRIMONIAL CHANCES.

A table of marriage probabilities gives some interesting facts and deductions: In a thousand cases no one is married before the age of fifteen. The marriage of women at that age is not unknown, but it is rare. Men do not begin to marry, as a rule, until they are eighteen years old. At the age of nineteen, when young men are just beginning to think seriously of the subject, young women are at their most favorable time, more of them marrying at that age than at any other. The years of greatest probability with women are from eighteen to twenty-five, culminating at twenty-two. At twenty and twenty

THE COUNTY TICKET.

The result of the Democratic primary elections in this county, as ascertained by the Return Judges at their meeting on Monday last, will be found printed elsewhere in our paper. It is highly creditable to the officers who conducted the elections in the different districts to say that no complaint of unfairness in the discharge of their duties was made against any one of them; but, on the contrary that they had acted fairly and impartially, and that there had been an honest count of the ballots. It is proper that this statement should be distinctly made in regard to the second trial of the Crawford County System in Cambria, whatever may be said against some of its features, and however much it may have failed to give general satisfaction in some other counties in which the system has been adopted. The fear entertained at one period of the canvass that in the Southern end of the county, the three aspirants for the most important offices, (Legislature and Sheriff), would probably all be successful, was happily removed by the good sense and sound judgment of the voters; and so far as the locality of the candidates nominated is concerned, a wise discrimination has been exercised and justice done to all sections. It is not at all necessary that we should at this time indulge in an extended notice of the several nominees. From the first name on the ticket to the last the candidates are well known to the people and it will be conceded that they are well qualified for an honest discharge of the duties of the respective offices for which they have been selected. We repeat now of the present ticket what we said last year in reference to the ticket then nominated for the first time under the new system, that it has been made by the Democrats of the county in their primary capacity that the nominees are competent, and having received plurality of all the votes polled, it is the duty of every Democrat to support it. That this will be done and done heartily we do not permit ourselves to entertain a doubt,

THE supporters of the administration of Chester A. Arthur are always ready to form a coalition with any and every faction and fag end of a party in the South which it finds lying around loose, all for the sake, as is hypocritically alleged, of breaking up the solid Democracy of that section. In South Carolina they combine with the Greenback party; in North Carolina with the friends of free whiskey and plenty of it; in Indiana with the Maine liquor law men; in Virginia with the Repudiationists; in Arkansas with the low tax party, and in Georgia, Texas, Alabama and Kentucky with the Independents and Greenbackers. This huddling together in the same political bed was recently tried at the elections in two of the above named States, Alabama and Kentucky, with the most unsatisfactory results, the Democrats having buried the coalition ticket in each State so deep that it can never be resurrected. The same results will follow in all of the other States named, with a mere possibility that the coalition may win in Virginia.

THE re-election on Monday last by the new Democratic County Committee, of Mr. T. H. Heist as Chairman was a deserved compliment to that gentleman, who, during the past year has discharged the duties of the position to the cordial and hearty satisfaction of the Democracy of the county. Mr. Heist, however, felt constrained to refuse accepting another term for the reason, as he stated to the Committee, that his entire time from now until November will be occupied in giving his personal attention to the large and elegant summer resort he is erecting west of town. The Committee then elected ex-Sheriff John A. Blair, to be Mr. Heist's successor. Sheriff B. is thoroughly acquainted throughout the county—possesses any amount of energy—always reflects before he acts, and will no doubt conduct the campaign in a vigorous and effective manner—in such a way, indeed, as will do the most good. He was also empowered to act as the member of the State Committee from this county,

THE terrible Colorado beetle, vulgarlarly called the potato bug, has crossed the Atlantic. A laborer while working on board the steamer Wisconsin, which arrived at Liverpool from New York on the 15th inst., found five of them. The Privy Council of the city ordered them to be killed and their bodies sent to London, probably for the inspection of the Queen. It would have been a good idea on the part of the Liverpool authorities to have preserved them and entrusted them to the keeping of some enemy of Ireland, to take over to that country and drop them in a potato patch, so that the irrepressible Irish would be kept busy killing potato bugs instead of shooting at landlords.

THE war between Egypt and England has not yet been productive of a pitched battle.

THOMAS VALENTINE COOPER, of Cadiz, Ohio, Chairman of Cameron's State Committee, the same individual who protests against the election of Robert E. Pattison as Governor of Pennsylvania because he happened to be born in Maryland, is, in the language of the great American humorist, Artemus Ward, "an amoosin' cuss." A correspondent of the New York Herald had a talk one day last week with Cooper, during which that hopeful youth declared: "Oh, we'll elect Beaver by 25,000. Pattison will not begin to poll the Democratic vote. For instance there are 47,000 veterans in the State; 15,000 of these are Democrats, and 7,000 of them will vote for Beaver. He has the Grand Army and the National Guard with him. In Cambria county the Grand Army has 1,400 members, of whom 248 are Democrats. We have made a careful canvass and all except three of these Democrats will vote for Beaver. Then the labor ticket will carry off 60,000 Democrats." There is much more of this cheap sort of brag detailed by the correspondent, but what we have quoted will do. It is by the manufacture of such campaign vaporing that this Ohio carpet-bagger hopes in his political extremity to infuse courage for the fight into Beaver's dispirited and already vanquished followers. We will now offset Cooper's boombast with what the Johnstown Tribune thinks of it. Referring to the interview in the Herald, the Tribune says that Cooper has been imposed upon by some one who did not know what he was talking about—that there is only one Grand Army Post in Cambria county—Emory Fisher Post, No. 30, Johnstown—"and that it has but 285 members in good standing on the roll, and there never were any more, nor were there ever 248 Democrats in the Post, nor has there ever been a canvass of it." Assuming this to be true, as it no doubt is, Cooper's "careful canvass" of the Grand Army in Cambria, which he says "we have made," proves him to be a more accomplished liar than Falstaff ever was when at his level best. There is some loud talk among the Beaver men who have been utterly disgusted with Cooper's management, of removing him and putting some man of common sense in his place, but we hope he will be permitted to play the amusing part of the monkey to the organ grinder until the end of the campaign.

NO EVENT in Ireland for many years has caused such widespread commotion as the arrest last week and imprisonment, without an opportunity for defense, of E. Dwyer Gray, High Sheriff of Dublin, proprietor of the Freeman's Journal, and a member of Parliament. The offense for which he was arrested consisted simply in publishing a letter written by Mr. William O'Brien, the editor of United Ireland, to the Journal, in which he charged that the jury in a murder trial during the previous week, had spent the night before coming into Court with a verdict of guilty, in wandering about the hotel, conversing with the guests and drinking to excess, instead of being guarded from communication with the outside public. For this publication Gray was arrested for contempt and appeared in court on Wednesday to answer. Mr. Gray asked time to prove the truth of the statement contained in O'Brien's letter, but Judge Lawson refused to permit the introduction of any evidence, and sentenced him to pay a fine of £500 and be imprisoned for three months. The people of Dublin became intensely excited at the high-handed and summary action of the Judge, and crowds assembled around the statue of Daniel O'Connell, where several speeches were delivered denouncing the Judge and the sentence. The Mayor of Dublin and Messrs Parnell, Davitt and Dillon issued a proclamation counselling the people to abstain from any gatherings in the streets which might lead to the least breach of the peace, and stated that in making this appeal they were expressing the earnest wishes of Mr. Gray. Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons next day admitted that the action of Judge Lawson for committing Mr. Gray for alleged contempt was without precedent As measures were at once taken to procure the release of Mr. Gray, there can little doubt that his prison-door, if not already, soon will be opened, but that will neither mitigate nor excuse the outrage.

THE Pottsville Standard, an ably edited Democratic journal, is vigorously urging upon the people of Schuylkill county the great interests they have at stake in the re-election of Hon Cyrus L. Pershing to the President Judgeship of that district. As we stated two or three weeks ago, Judge Pershing has two competitors for the place, John W. Ryon, and James B. Reilly, both of whom are seeking a nomination from the Democratic county convention, while Judge P. proposes to run as the candidate of the people, irrespective of the action of political conventions, and the Standard of last week in referring to the matter and the candidacy of Messrs. Ryon, and Reilly says: "Possibly at some other time either or both these gentlemen would be cheerfully awarded a nomination; but it is just as well for them to understand that at this juncture a very large majority of the people of Shuylkill county prefer to retain Judge Pershing on the Bench, and will carry out that determination at the polls regardless of all or any political conventions. Any candid and intelligent man, who impartially considers the situation, must confess that such is the fact; and it is a fact which these gentlemen and their friends, in justice to themselves, no less than to the Democratic party, should have the frankness and courage to look squarely in the face." All of which is a boom for Mr. Pershing and a boomerang for the advocates of a partisan judiciary.

THE Department of State, at Washington, has been informed that the British Government, in addition to ordering the release of McSweeny and Flattery, two of the Irish-American suspects has also under consideration the question or discharging Mahoney and Brophy, the last of the Irish-American suspects now in prison.

A DISTINCTIVE LABOR PARTY.

A "labor convention is called to assemble in Philadelphia on the 28th inst. for what purpose cannot be definitely ascertained. Some of the leaders in the movement declare that the convention will nominate a State ticket; others assert that it has no political object except to take action in regard to the election of members of the Legislature pledged to the interests of the working-people; while others again are of the opinion that the convention will endorse Armstrong, the Greekback candidate for Governor, and recommend the Greenback candidates for Congress and the Legislature.

The complaint of the laboring classes is that that their rights and interests are not properly protected by law, and that on the contrary the laws discriminate them as a class. They are especially anxious to repeal the act of Assembly which subjects "strikers to prosecution for conspiracy, and to secure such legislation as will enable labor unions to organize in a corporate capacity. Doubtless the mass of those who are enlisted in the movement are men of sincere and earnest purpose, but it is equally true that there are among them designing and self-seeking persons, who hope to use the labor organizations to their own advantage and who will not hesitate to betray the interests of the workingmen if by so doing they can fill their pockets or obtain political power This later class naturally favors the organization of a "labor party" and the nomination of labor candidates, or, what would be the same thing, the endorsement of the Greenback nominations. If they can carry their point they will be in a position to trade and huckster in the political market to their hearts' content.

The fact is that the concentration of the labor vote of Pennsylvania upon a distinctive labor ticket, either that headed by the Creenbacker Armstrong, or another to be nominated by the convention on the 28th, is now the only hope of Cameron in his desperate and losing fight for continued supremacy in the politics of the State. It is indeed only a faint hope, but the boss and his assistant bosses nevertheless cling to it with great tenacity. It is therefore for the workingmen of Pennsylvania to determine whether their power at the ballot-boxes shall be perverted to the base uses of the Cameron machine or exerted for the liberation of the commonwealth from the political domination which has bro't them all their woes. For the laws of which they complain were framed by Republican legislatures. They have appealed in vain to the Republican party for the relief and protection they seek. Their petition for a law protecting them against the store order system was vetoed by a Republican Governor. Their efforts for a repeal of the conspiracy act were defeated by a Republican majority in the Legislature. Their eight hour law, thrown as a sop for their amusement, has been a dead letter on the statute book during all Republican administration. On the other hand, when Democracy was in power, practical measures for the relief of the workingmen were enacted. The first homestead bill was a Democratic measure. The mechanics' lien law came from Democratic hands. The law abolishing imprisonment for debt was of Democratic authorship. The $300 exemption law was passed by a Democratic Legislature for the benefit of laoor, and the "anti-store order" bill was drawn, presented and pushed to passage by Democratic legislators. But the Democratic party has not been in full possession of the powers of the government in State or Republic since 1860. It is therefore not able to legislate according to its own will and must be judged by its record when in power. That record proves it to have been the true friend of the workingmen; proves that it always heard their complaints and righted the wrongs of the honest toiler. It could not have done otherwise; it cannot do otherwise now. Its voting strength is largely drawn from the laboring class to-day, as it was twenty and thirty years ago. It is the party of the plain, common people the antagonist of aristocratic government the concrete expression of the feelings, thoughts and aspirations of the Industrial element which is and must remain the hope and stay of free institutions.—Harrisburg Patriot.

AN interesting feature in Virginia politics just now is the fight between Fulkerson, a Readjuster member of Congress and Mahone. At the nominating convention in Fulkerson's district on Friday last, the full strength and influence of Mahone was thrown in favor of H. J. Bowen, and he was nominated over Fulkerson's head, Fulkerson has announced himself as an Independent candidate, and pledged himself, if elected, to vote with the Democrats in the next Congress, and to support the Democratic State ticket, hoping by these means to receive the Democratic vote. There are very few negro voters in the district. Jorgenson, now the Republican member of the House from Mahones own district, has also announced himself as an Independent candidate and denouncing Mahone in the most bitter terms. There is thus a strong probability that Mahone's coalition in Virginia will fall to pieces before November.

WE have seen ladies, who when they wanted to remember some particular thing, would tie a string around one of their fingers. This would be a good thing for the Democrats who are not registered to do. Every time they would look at the finger with the string on they would recall the fact that they are not registered, and unless they are they cannot vote without ten times the trouble that getting registered would cost. September 7th is the last day that this important matter can be attended to, but you can tie a string on your finger now and then you'll not forget to be registered the first day you are near where your register lives.—Bellefonte Watchman.

GEN. A. H. COFFROTH is announced in the Johnstown Democrat of last week says the Greensburg Democrat, as a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in that district. Should he be successful in the conference, the district will be redeemed, as he merits preferment and is deservedly popular with the people. Let the General be nominated by all means, for he is about the only man in the district who can make the Republican fur fly in a free and fair fight.

—According to the Rochester Union a boy called at the side door of the residence of a gentleman of that city recently and begged for something to eat. The servant said they had nothing. "Give me only a piece of bread," said the boy. A white terrier dog that had stood beside the girl was momentarily missed, but quickly returned, bearing in her mouth a large piece of bread that had been previously given her to eat. The dog went directly up to the boy, extended her paws, with the bread in her mouth, and offered it to him.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 7TH, is the last day upon which you can be registered. Don't put it off until that time. You may forget it and not register at all. YOUR vote and the vote of every other Democrat is needed to redeem Pennsylvania this fall from the rule of the Cameron ring. See that you are prepared to vote.

A FULL Democratic vote is all that is needed to defeat the ring this fall. See to it, Democrats, that every man in your neighborhood who votes the Democratic ticket is properly registered and fixed for voting. Now is the time to attend to it.

DOES HE WANT TO HURT HIM?

We have heard it whispered for some time, says the Bellefonte Watchman, that the Republican, of this place, which away from home is spoken or as "Beaver's home organ," is not the strongest supporter he has, and that his defeat would not cause its editor to shed many tears—the cause of the lukewarmness being of Beaver's betrayal of Blain and his growling at paying the amount Tuten charged him some months ago for publishing his biography. Whether the Republican editor feels as reports say he does, or whether there is truth in the rumors of his lukewarmness, may not bother Beaver very much, but in that paper of the present week's issue a demand is made, which if in earnest and could be complied with, would knock the stuffin' out of the General's gubernatorial goose so quick and so clean that he would scarcely be recognized as an aspirant for the position he seeks, The demand of the Republican is nothing more nor less than that the Democrats shall return to General Beaver the leg he lost at Ream's Station.

If this demand could be complied with what would be left of Beaver as a candidate before the people? What recommendation would he have as a candidate for Governor? What reason would any one have for voting for him? Won't some one please tell us?

To put another leg on him would be to rob him of every particle of political strength he possibly can have. The fact that he lost a leg in the army, a misfortune that befel thousands of other men just as brave, and many of them better than Beaver, is the only thing in his whole life that his friends have to point to as a recommendation for the votes of the people.

They may say he is a lawyer but the people are not "hankerin" after lawyers particularly, and when they come to hunt Beaver up as a lawyer, even, they find he is away down among the fourth or fifth rate men of his profession.

They may say he is a Christian, but Christian people remember how many hypocrites have used the livery of the church to accomplish political ends, and they do not forget that Beaver with all his pretended devotion to Christian duties, willfully violated the Lord's day by leaving his Sunday school and home to attend a political caucus in Philadelphia no later than Sunday evening, April 30th, 1882.

They may say he is a good citizen, so are hundreds of thousands of other men who never thought of being candidates for Governor,

When they say he is a lawyer (a fourth or fifth one), a Christian, (one who attends political caucuses on Sunday), a good citizen, (no better than thousands of others), they say all that can be said of him, except the other fact first alluded to and of which the Republican would now rob him.

We have known for some time that the editor of the Republican was not an enthusiastic ever General Beaver's candidacy, but we had no idea that he openly advocated anything calculated to injure the General before the public. But we can all be deceived, and now must confess that we have have had our eye shut up completly in this matter. Tuten don't want Beaver elected, if he is in earnest about restoring that leg,

But, after all, here may be hypocrisy even in this, and the Republican editor know that Beaver has, as we say, nothing else to commend to public support, and may be making his queer demand just to attract attention to his candidates chief qualification.

No matter, however, what Mr. Tuten's intent was in making the demand he did; the suggestion was too cruelly cruel for anything, for let the purpose be what it may, it can only call attention to the paucity of reasons that can be given why any man should vote for Gen. Beaver for Governor.

BEFORE intrusting the Democratic party with power, the people will be apt to inquire what its principles are and what its practical objects are. The principles of the Democratic party are clearly defined. They are excellently stated in the letter of Chauncey F. Black, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, as including, among other things, opposition to the lavishing of "needless millions snatched from the hands of patient labor upon objects not distinctly defined by the constitution." In other words, they include opposition to precisely such jobs as the River and Harbor bill, which a majority of both Houses present and voting on its passage nevertheless disgraced themselves and discredited their party by supporting. In what does the Democracy consist if a Democrat who talks about the "principles of Jackson," and who, when an occasion to vindicate the principles of Jackson actually offers itself, shows that his only care to secure to his district its "share" of whatever money is squandered upon the "objects not clearly defined in the constitution?" The principles of the Democratic party are real and unwavering, whoever maintains them or whoever is recreant to them.—N. Y. World.

IF there is any such thing as unconscious heroism, says the Philadelphia Times, Fannie Conman, a fourteen-year-old girl of New York, possesses it in a high degree. While playing near a boat house on the Harlem river she dived headlong from the end of a pier to rescue from drowning little Jessie Renton, her playmate. Little Jessie came to the surface unconscious and was sinking for the third time, when she was grasped by her brave young friend and borne to a boat twenty feet away. After seeing the half drowned girl safe in the arms of her older brother Miss Fannie swam after her slipper, which had dropped from her foot as she dived from the wharf and which was bobbing up and down on the water some distance out in the stream. The practical-minded swimmer said afterward that it was a new slipper and she didn't want it lost, at the same time expressing childish surprise that any one should praise her for saving little Jessie.

THE POPE AND IRELAND.—A letter from the Pope to the Irish Bishops, dated August 1, was published in Rome on Sunday last. His Holiness, expressing his profound regret that tranquility has not been restored in Ireland and that murders continue to be committed, says: "The Irish people, by following the advice of their prelates may hope for the alleviation of the ills from which they suffer. A just cause must be upheld by just means. Secret societies must be shunned. In the words of St. Augustine, the first charter of the rights of liberty is the non-commission of crimes. They are the most to be active supporters of public order during the present troubles." The letter concludes by expressing the hope that the English Government will do justice to the equitable claim of the Irish people, remembering that the pacification of Ireland constitutes an element of tranquility in the whole empire.

—The most amusing pair on the River and Harbor bill was that between Beltzhoover, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, and McCook, Republican, of New York. The former was present upon the passage of the bill over the veto, but did not vote. His constituents quarreled with him because he ought to have in such a case paired with two men; and, in fact, McCook was opposed to the bill. On the other hand, McCook is getting it from his New York constituents for pairing at all and absenting himself at so important a time. Taking the explanations of both gentlemen, they were on the same side and there was as much reason for their pairing as there would be for Keifer and Robeson to stand aside on any question coming within the reach of the House of Representatives.

"THREW AWAY HER SUPPORTER."

DR. PIERCE:—A neighbor of ours was suffering from "female weakness" which the doctors told her could not be cured without a supporter. After considerable persuasion my wife induced her to try your "Favorite Prescription." After using one bottle she threw away the supporter and did a large washing, which she had not done in two years before. JAMES MILLER.

—A Philadelphia paper's sneering remark that Mr. Pattison "has not a qualification for governor, except that he is intelligent, has a high school education and is honest," is thus met by the Record, an independent journal of large circulation: "Well, if every officeholder in the land had these qualifications, and no more, the country would be far better governed than it is now. But what a lot of vacancies would be created in our present model civil service."

—Five years ago Wilhelmina Rousseau arrived in this country from the little Belgian town of Roubais. A bright face, a pair of crutches and a blasphemous parrot constituted the sole capital with which she began business in a strange land. —To handsome young girls, named Laura Morwin and Delia Stile, quarreled at Columbus, Ga., a few evenings ago about a young man and agreed to settle the dispute according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules. Seconds were immediately chosen and this morning at daybreak, with a party of friends, they crossed the Alabama line and a ring was pitched. Two rounds were fought. In the first round, which lasted three minutes the ladies were severely punished. In the second round Delia Stile, who was the larger girl, beat her adversary most unmercifully and was declared the victor.

—As outlined last week, the strike of the Pan Handle coal miners against a reduction from four cents to three and a half ended on Monday in their defeat, all the strikers who would obtain work at the reduction going in that morning. The struggle has been the most protracted and expensive ever known in that district. In the four months and a half, since the first day of April, when the men laid down their picks, they have lost in wages $250,000. The operators have lost their summer contracts and their footing to some extent in the market, and the railroad company has lost heavily in freights.

—There was a sensation in a prayer meeting at Jonesboro, Ark., the other night. Rev. J. H. Porter, the leading divine of the place, while exhorting his hearers to come forward, was noticed to gasp for breath and his eyes filled with tears. He at last recovered and cried out: "My God, is it so? Is my work done?" Before those nearest could catch him he fell to the pulpit chair. He had been stricken dumb, and all efforts to restore his voice have proved unavailing. The best physicians of the neighborhood have given the case their attention, but it is believed that he will never be able to speak again.

DOCTORS AND CHURCHES.—The doctors of New York city, hundreds of whom have personally visited Speer's Vineyards during the wine making season, says his Port Grape Wine has proved to be pure, unadulterated, of a fine flavor and tonic properties and is unsurpassed for its restorative powers, and they prescribe it as a very superior wine. The principal churches in New York and Brooklyn use it for communion. For sale by E. James, Ebensburg.

A GOLD-PLATING GEYSER.—Last year F. J. Haynes, the Fargo photographer, visited the Yellowstone National Park and secured from the Government the exclusive right to establish the National Art Studio. He located the ground, ten acres, and the plot was recorded by the custodian of the Park. The ground selected is in the heart of the geyser basin, and is a very beautiful spot. While photographing last fall he discovered one geyser that spouts gold, that is, by holding a piece of any kind of metal in the geyser during eruption, the article becomes plated with a durable thickness of gold. Mr. Haynes' watch-chain is a proof of the lasting qualities of the plate.—Salt Lake Tribune.

—Bucks county takes the cake. She owns a sleep walker who got up on Sunday night last and killed one of his pigs and had it half dressed before he awoke. The pig was stuck and bled with as much precision as though done by a butcher. The strange part of it is that the man had never done such a thing in his waking hours and knew nothing about butchering.

—The Johnstown Tribune says that "Roscoe Conkling" received four votes in Millville borough at the Democratic primary election for member of the County Committee. The men who cast them wanted to have a joke on Patrick Connelly, who was not permitted to withdraw from the Millville Connell. Pat. Minahan, of the same borough, got four votes for Coroner.

—A colored man, who gives his name as Clifton Joseph Berry, was arrested at Altoona on Wednesday of last week on the charge of being the person who shot John Keresy and raped Annie Davis in McCauly's woods some days ago, and taken before Mayor Howard and was bound over to court by that officer in the sum of $2,000. Failing to find the requisite security he was sent to jail.

—Our old friend Mr. Alexander Grief, of this place, was brought to his last name by having his right eye severely burned by a spark of hot metal while engaged in tapping the cupola at the Ebensburg foundry on last Saturday morning. Rumor hadit for a time that the injured eye had been burned out, but we are glad to say that the report was unfounded and that Mr. Grief is getting along admirably.

—The base ball club of this place went to Lilly's on Saturday last and played a match game with the Red Stockings of that place. At the end of the ninth inning the score stood 11 to 22 in favor of the Ebensburg b. b.s, who will henceforth be known as the "Dublin boys," having doubled up on the Lilies of the field, or rather in the field, so to speak in a base (though not dia) ballical sense.

—A student lamp exploded in this place on last Saturday evening and hadit not been for the presence of mind of the ladies of the house, three in number, including a visiting relative, the probabilities are that first-class local would have been furnished to the newspapers. As it was, the situation for a short time was exceedingly precarious, but by dint of good management, and a speedy application of the smothering process the flames were soon subdued.

—An effort was made a few nights ago to enter the residence of Constable M. J. Noel, of White township, the would-be burglar or burglars breaking a pane of glass and raising a window, the doing of which awakened Mr. N., who got up and fired at the intruder, the shot taking effect, as he thinks, in the right arm of that individual, who thereupon made himself scarce. Next morning several counterfeit nickles were found just inside the door of Mr. N.'s stable.

—The Huntingdon Journal is right when it says that the two children of the late Col. Wm. G. Murray, of Hollidaysburg, to whom a pension was refused by Congress just before its adjournment, are a thousand times more deserving than many whose names are now on the pension roll, but it is mistaken as to the application, only one of the two children aforesaid, Miss Mary, being in pursuit of a pension. The matter will be brought up again at the next session.

—McDonald, of Loretto, sells sugars at 8, 9, 10 and 11 cts. per lb.; teas, 25, 50 and 75 cts. per lb.; coffees, 12½, 16 and 18 cts. per lb.; two boxes essence coffee, 5 cts.; two papers soda, 5 cts.; four lbs. rice, 25 cts.; four lbs. oat meal, 25 cts.; three lbs. dried peaches, 25 cts.; three lbs. prunes, 25 cts.; five good cigars, 10 cts.; four pieces of chewing tobacco, 25 cts.; six papers good smoking tobacco, 25 cts., and canned peaches, tomatoes, corn, apples, peas, beans, etc., etc., at aquality low prices.

—There is a charm about thee, maiden, that I cannot well define, and I sometimes think it lieth in that handsome face of thine; yet again it strikes me that the taste by thee so often shown in selecting neatest dress and other goods of best and finest tone, at John Gyeser store, where folks can always find, at lowest prices, goods of every kind, is what makes thee seem so charming and thy taste so well displays, for John is always anxious to serve the public, and merits highest praise.

—There can certainly be no one in or about Ebensburg or parts adjacent who need to be told that C. M. Roberts' Variety Store is as well deserving of public patronage as any other establishment in the county, for surely better goods or lower prices it would be folly to seek for. Cham's stock is full and fine in every department, and especially in the line of hats and shoes, of both which he has an elegant, varied and abundant assortment—so complete indeed that all tastes can be suited and the very best bargains insured.

—One of the most esteemed of our many young friends, Mr. John C. Dickey, a Johnstown boy, who was recently transferred from the P. R. R. ticket office at Hollidaysburg, where he was agent, to the ticket office in Pittsburgh, has, we are glad to say, just struck a much better thing than either at Huntington, W. Va., to which place he betook himself and his family a few days ago. We don't know what kind of a situation he has secured, but we are assured that it is an advance, and that is just what such men as our friend John deserves every twelvemonth at least.

—Although Mr. Josiah Waters, of Johnstown, who was a candidate for Sheriff at the Democratic primary election on Saturday last, was defeated by D. A. Luther, he has ample reason to feel proud of the very large vote he received. Those who are well acquainted with Mr. Waters, and who are familiar with his course during the canvass, all bear testimony to his frank, open and honorable conduct. It is some consolation for an unsuccessful candidate to know and feel that he came out of the contest with as fair a name and honorable a reputation as he had when he entered into it.

—Mrs. Ann Markey, wife of Mr. Patrick Markey, a well known and highly respected citizen of Cambria Borough, died at her home on Sunday evening last. The deceased was born in Ireland in 1814 and came to this country in the year 1850, and was held in the highest respect and esteem by her neighbors, as well as by all who knew her. May her soul rest in peace.

—Mr. Jas. A. McPike, of Pittsburgh, who paid us a pop visit on Wednesday, will look in on the business men of Altoona to-day (Friday) and return hither to-morrow with a like purpose in view. On Monday he will visit Johnstown. Mr. McP. represents the most extensive notion, fancy goods and toy houses in the Smoky City, that of C. G. Lauer, importer and jobber, 100 Market street, and hopes to introduce himself and the house for future trade. He is a cousin of the editor of this paper, but that is more his misfortune than his fault. So please don't give him the cold shoulder on that account. Will the two Tribunes notice the fact on Friday and much oblige?

—Fully one hundred persons from Altoona, the greater portion of whom are members of the Emerald Beneficial Society, reached here per train Tuesday evening and went hence per vehicles, large and small, to Carrolltown, where they took in the band picnic on Wednesday and will return hence to day (Thursday). The delegation comprised a number of ladies and was accompanied by the "de leedle scherman band," which discoursed some fine music while passing through our town. The regalia worn by the members of the Emerald Society, a branch of which has recently been established at Carrolltown, is gorgeously green, with the harp of Erin resplendently prominent, and for this reason, if for no other, the advent of the Emeraiders and the "wearing of the green" to that place may be said to mark a new era in the history of that honest and hospitable community.

—On last Saturday evening two little girls, Ellie and Lizzie Reese, of Woodvale, went with their friend Ada McGuire to Mr. John Crouse's place, on the hillside beyond the railroad, for a pail of milk. On their return they reached the railroad just as a freight train was passing, and they stood on the north track watching it. At the same time a locomotive was engaged in making a running shift on another track, and after the freight train had gone by, the engineer of the shifting engine saw the girls standing on the track and blew his whistle, fearing they might attempt to cross in front of his locomotive. Little Ellie made the attempt to do so, was struck by the engine and thrown a distance of fifteen or twenty yards. Her death resulted instantly. She was a daughter of Mr. George Reese, a coal miner at Ben's Creek, and was not quite six years old.

—We learn from the Johnstown Tribune that when the Fast Line arrived at East Conemaugh on Sunday night, about one hundred persons who had been attending a camp meeting near that place, were at the station to take passage for Johnstown. A large number of deadbeats were in the crowd, who attempted to steal their way down by hiding between the baggage cars and behind the tender. The conductor, Mr. Dan Kearney, of Altoona, saw them, and just as the train began to move went forward and succeeded in compelling them to leave the cars. He was then on the baggage car from which he jumped to the track, intending to board the first passenger car to collect tickets, but his foot caught in the switch at the place he alighted, and he was thrown violently to the ground, without, however, being seriously injured. Of course he missed the car but was sent from East Conemaugh to Johnstown on a special engine in time to go on with his train to Pittsburgh.

—We learn from the Indiana Messenger of last week that Miss Sue Patchin, who at the time was on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Mahaffey, of Cherrytree, made a narrow escape from a frightful death a few evenings ago. It seems that Miss P. had been attending a social gathering and coming in late attempted to extinguish the lamp which had been left burning for her by blowing down the chimney; but instead of the light going out the lamp instantly exploded. She was badly frightened and her screams brought Mr. Mahaffy to the rescue and taking in the situation, enveloped the burning lamp with a piece of carpet. Miss Patchin's dress was covered with oil and it is almost a miracle that it did not take fire. But it didn't, and we are spared recording a horrible death. Moral: never attempt to extinguish a lamp by blowing down the chimney. There is no more ready way to have a first-class explosion.

SAD DEATH OF BROTHER VINCENT.—We deeply regret to announce the death of Brother Vincent, O. S. F., which sad event occurred at the monastery of St. Francis' College, Lorotto, on last Saturday evening. We do not know his age, but suppose it to have been between sixty-five and seventy years. He was born in Ireland and came to this country fourteen years ago, proceeding as once to Loretto, where after spending ten years at the College as one of its professors, he was sent to Altoona for the purpose of teaching in the Catholic schools in that city. Only a few months ago he returned to St. Francis. The cause of the accident which resulted in his death is difficult to explain. It appears that on Wednesday of last week he was engaged in whitewashing the ceiling of the old chapel at the College, and did his work on a platform or scaffolding, not more than six or seven feet high, which he had erected for that purpose. While he was at his work Rev. Father John Ward visited the chapel, had a brief conversation with Brother Vincent in reference to the improvements he was making in its appearance, and just as he (Father Ward) was about to pass out of the door he heard a noise as of some one falling, and turning around saw Brother Vincent lying on the floor. Whether he made a misstep on the platform, or was stricken by paralysis or apoplexy, must remain a mystery. He was immediately removed to his room and the College physician summoned to his bedside, but all efforts failed to resuscitate him or even restore the gift of speech. He remained in a comatose state until Saturday evening, when his gentle spirit returned to the God who gave it, and whom he served so long and faithfully. Brother Vincent possessed a high order of intellect and had stored his mind with a vast amount of profound and varied knowledge. No man was ever more sincerely beloved and respected for his gentle and kindly nature and for the intense zeal he always manifested for the welfare, happiness and instruction of children—in a word for all the noble qualities of head and heart that go to make up a true man and a devout Christian. His memory will ever be cherished by those who knew him at St. Francis', as well as in Altoona, where the expressions of regret and sorrow over his death is confined to no class or circle in society. His remains were laid to rest with fitting ceremonies on Monday forenoon. May eternal rest be the portion of his pure and upright soul.

SUICIDE NEAR PORTAGE.—On Saturday evening last, Hugh Farren, a man in humble circumstances, who resided about a mile south of Portage station, on the P. R. R., in this county, and who was about sixty-six years of age, committed suicide by shooting himself though the head with a revolver, which he had purchased at Johnstown about two weeks ago. His wife testified before a jury of inquest, empanelled by P. McGough, Esq., of Portage, that when she came home from an errand to an neighbor's about four o'clock in the afternoon, she asked her little girl as to the whereabouts of her father, and was told that he gone up into the woods soon after she (Mrs. F.) had left the house, which was about three hours before. The girl was then told by her mother to go up and tell her father to come to supper. The little girl started at once on her errand, but but soon returned and informed her mother that her father had killed himself. Mrs. Farren stated that during the past year her husband had frequently threatened to take his own life, and acted like a deranged person. All his neighbors, it may be added, believed him of unsound mind. The verdict of the inquest was that the deceased came to his death by shooting himself in the forehead with a pistol.

Hop Bitters Co.—I have been sick for the past six years, suffering from dyspepsia and general weakness. I have used three bottles of Hop Bitters, and they have done more for me. I am well and able to work, and eat and sleep well. I cannot say too much for Hop Bitters. SIMON ROBBINS.

TOOK IT HOME TO HIM.—Some time last winter a Mr. Collins, living near Shirleysburg, says the Altoona Tribune, and son of the late Rev. Collins, of the Presbyterian church, was married to a Miss Grove, of the neighborhood of Orbisonia. A short time since an unmarried daughter of Mr. Bolinger, of Black Log valley, gave birth to a child the father of which she claimed was the aforesaid Collins. Immediately after its birth the girl's father took possession of the babe and without dressing it carried it some seven miles in a basket and presented it to its reputed father and his young bride. One informant states the poor babe's skin was excoriated in several places from contact with the rough basket in which it was carried. We only add with the poet: "Can such things be in this enlightened age?" The parties are all of the highest respectability and standing. I should mention that the young gentleman who thus became involuntarily the possessor of the child has accepted it, and by kind usage is endeavoring to make amends for the mighty wrong done the poor girl whose only fault was in loving not wisely but too well.

CARD OF THANKS.—One of Ebensburg's most popular tonsorial artists, Mr. H. Gant, who commenced business here nearly one year ago, wishes to return thanks to the people of this community for their liberal patronage during the past, and hopes for a continuation of the same in the future. He has lately fitted up his tonsorial parlor in good style, and will spare no pains to make it comfortable for all who may favor him with a call. Clean towels a specialty.

DEATH OF AN ESTIMABLE OLD LADY.—Mrs. Elizabeth Strittmatter, wife of Francis Strittmatter, of Carroll township, and mother of our much deserving young friend Dr. I. P. Strittmatter, of St. Mary's Hospital, Philadelphia, died about 2 o'clock on last Sunday morning, while seated in a chair. She had been long ailing. Her age, we presume was between fifty-five and sixty years. We hope for a more extended obituary next week. May her soul rest in peace.

LETTER FROM CRESSON.

A QUEER WORLD AND A QUEER FELLOW—A FLORICULTURIST—CRESSON'S CHOIR, THO' CHARMING, IS NOT RAVISHING—THE TARIFF COMMISSION PUTTING IN STURDY BLOWS FOR THE AMERICAN LABORER—MORE OF DORSEY'S "FROZEN FACTS."

CALLAN HOUSE, Aug. 21, 1882.

DEAR HENRY—A queer world is this.—There is always something to bother us. The average man and woman is generally in the dumps. It has been too cold here for the last several days for comfort. Some days ago we were stewing and fretting in our shirt sleeves, but since that we have been shivering for fear of our sisters. All the guests of the Callan House have been finding fault with the weather, with the exception of one "don't care for nothin'" kind of fellow, who can be hot or cold just as he pleases. He is the strangest genius I ever met with. He is an enigma that I can't riddle out. He is a strange compound of good and bad. At times he seems to have corresponded with that gentleman and then came to Johnstown, and having got all the information he could in regard to the appearance and clothing of the boy killed there. He went to Bristol and had the remains disinterred. The remains were much decomposed, but Mr. Seaburn found two marks on the body which this fellow had received from having been injured. One mark was a scarred wound on the arm and another a scar on the head, caused by the kick of a horse. The upper front teeth of his son protruded in a remarkable way, and the same was the case with the teeth in the Bristol remains. Mr. Woodhead has given his consent, Mr. Seaburn did not remove the remains to Mercer county but permitted them to remain in the beautiful lot in which Mr. Woodhead had caused them to be buried.

He wore her brother's winter cap,
Her father's summer coat;
She had her father's necktie on,
And met a William quite a-
No sooner had she winked at him—
'Twas quicker done than said—
He lifted her about ten feet,
And stood her on her head.

That showed the nature of the shoes she wore, which is, generally, wrong in all Christianized community. But possibly the ends covered the means. Her dad showed a No. 2 garter, and no mistake, and that gaiter was bought at S. Blumenthal's, 1119 Eleventh avenue, Altoona. The only moral we have is to patronise Mr. Blumenthal.

It was a youth of modest purse
Said soft unto a maid:
"Which would you rather tackle next,
Ice cream or lemonade?"
Across the maiden's rosy cheek
Fast flits a winning smile;
I'll order some of both," she said,
Heaven help the young man's plie.

Unless he is in need of clothing and it strikes him that he can go to Jas. J. Murphy's, 109 Clinton street, Johnstown, and buy himself such. Mr. Murphy has a stock of ready-made clothing which for magnitude and richness has never been surpassed in Cambria county, and with reference to low prices he challenges the low—lower—lowest? Call and see him.

When the hay begins to tumble,
Then the hay bee doth bumble,
And he makes the granger fumble
In the mansard of his pants:
And so do the hoppers and the hornets and the ants.

We seize the opportunity between showers to say that we don't care much about the hay and the busy bee and so forth. But this is a fact of vital importance: When you want to buy a superior suit of clothing, call on or send to 210 Main street, next door to the Opera House, Johnstown. By so doing you will make no mistake.

WALNUT LEAF HAIR RESTORER.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & Co., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York. [6-2.-ly.]

IDENTIFIED AT LAST.—The question of the identity of the boy who was killed by the cars on the 9th of last month at the Johns town station, has been definitely settled. It will be remembered that a Mr. Woodhead of Baltimore came to Johnstown and identified the remains after they had been disinterred, as those of his missing son, and that he took them to Bristol, Bucks county, where he resided previous to his removal to Baltimore, and there buried them. A few days afterwards, however, he lost boy returned to his home in Baltimore. A son of Samuel Seaburn, of Sharon, Mercer county, in this State, had left his father's home about the same time Mr. Woodhead's boy disappeared and Mr. Seaburn, having read the account in the papers about Mr. Woodhead having buried a boy who was not his son, corresponded

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.—Hon. L. D. Woodruff, editor of the Johnstown Democrat wanted to be renominated for Assembly at the late Democratic primary election, but, like many another good man in a like situation, found himself a little short of votes. This fact, however, does not deter him in his paper this week from greeting the ticket nominated with his old-time ardor and devotion to the good cause nor from referring at some length and in highly commendatory terms to each of the candidates personally. We have only space for the first paragraph of the editorial in question, but that will serve as a sample of the whole. Here it is:

"The ticket selected on Saturday last, at the Democratic primary election, will be found at the head of our paper to-day. That it is a good and strong one even the enemies of Democracy will admit. It is the result of the second trial of the "Crawford County System" in this county, and its admirable selection in regard to locality, and the masterful skill which it is composed, it strengthens the advocates of that system and weaken the opposition of those who have been opposed to it. So far as local or sectional interests are concerned, it could not have been better selected, and the candidates are individually and collectively of such character and sterling worth that it is not only the duty but should be the pleasure of every Democrat to give them his earnest and sincere support. A united effort on the part of the Democrats will bring our county up to the old time majorities, and every indication now promises that such an effort will be made."

A COAL MINER LOSES A LEG ON THE RAILROAD.—On Saturday morning William Robinson and two companions, all employed as miners at the Benscreek collieries, paid a visit to Gallitzin. About noon they started to walk home, along the railroad track. When they reached a point about one mile west of Gallitzin, they attempted to board a west bound freight train, but the attempt was a rash one so far as Robinson was concerned, as he was thrown on the rail, and the wheels passed over his left leg, crushing it terribly. His right foot also was badly contused. His companions lifted him from the track, and Mail east coming along a few minutes later, he was taken on board, carried to Gallitzin, and made as comfortable as possible in Fitzharris' hotel. The Company physician in Altoona, was sent for, and, assisted by Drs. Miller and Troxell, of Gallitzin, he amputated the left leg at the knee joint. Robinson is thirty-five years of age, and has a wife and four children in England. He has only been in this country a short time and his family were soon to join him. The Poor authorities of Cambria county have assumed charge of the injured man, and as soon as he is able to be moved he will be taken to the almshouse at Ebensburg.—Johnstown Tribune.

COAL TAR AS AN ANTISEPTIC.

Mr. James F. Cliff, West Bromwich, England, writing to the British Live Stock Journal of the very valuable qualities of coal-tar and its derivative, carbolic acid, as antiseptic, disenfectants, and as being very destructive to parasitical life, gives the general outlines of the purpose to which he considers them applicable, leaving farmers and others to draw their own conclusions as to what may be the best use to make of them in any particular case:

"There is no doubt that the presence of carbolic acid in coal tar is the cause of its utility as a disinfectant, and although for many purposes carbolic acid would be preferable if not essential, still there are many cases in which coal tar is quite as effectual and far more easily applied. As an antiseptic I have seen many cases of wounds being prevented from purifying or becoming fly-brown by a timely application. When by neglect they have become putrid, or even swarming with lice or maggots, a smearing or two of tar has soon caused them to assume a healthy tone. Malignant sores, such as foot rot or foul in the foot, are quickly brought into a healthy condition, and the disease is prevented from recurring, by continuing the application until the skin is replaced, as from the greasy nature of tar it forms a plaster on the wound, preventing mud and dirt coming in contact which greatly impede recovery.

"As a disinfectant coal tar is very serviceable in all buildings in which live stock are kept, and is very easily applied by painting with it all the wood work, or indeed walls as well, if light is not an object. All foul gases and objectionable smell, putrid and unwholesome matter are quickly overcome and rendered harm less, and at the same time insects and parasites which usually intest such places are immediately destroyed. For a great many purposes no doubt coal tar would be objectionable, and in such cases carbolic acid, in some of its forms is to be preferred.

"As I have said, the acid is the effective principle of the tar and may be relied upon to serve all purposes thoroughly. As an antiseptic ointment for sores in exposed places on light colored animals or on pets in which coal tar would look uncleanly or unsightly the acid, in varied proportions with lard, olive oil, or other suitable ointment as a basis, forms a safe and effectual application. I have also used it successfully internally in a case of canker in the mouth of a cow by a suitable dilution with glycerine and water. Disinfecting powder is another useful form in which the acid can be employed, as it is not so unsightly as the tar when scattered on the floors and walls, and a little, used frequently, quickly deodorizes and purifies its surroundings.

"Again, its use as a fumigator has frequently came under my personal notice. I believe that in this form its effect is most marked. A little acid put on a heated shovel (not red hot) will quickly deodorize and disinfect a large building, as the fumes ascend, and penetrate all nooks and crevices. Another form of the same process is to keep boiling a small vessel filled with water, and frequently add a quantity of carbolic acid, when the steam will disseminate the fumes with equal effect. It was the knowledge of the effective nature of carbolic acid in this form as a disinfectant which first induced me to write these abrupt notes, thinking they might be of service, more particularly in cases of pleuro-pneumonia, in which inhalawould be more likely than any other treatment to prove successful.

"My practice in cases requiring internal application has been to dissolve the acid in glycerine and water, and to dilute until as strong as the mouth can bear without a burning sensation, when it may be administered with safety to any one of our domestic animals. For outward use I have one part acid to ten of lard, olive oil, or other suitable ointment; while, for disinfecting purposes, a common quality may be used, with from five to ten times its bulk to water. It will be well-known to most of your readers that coal tar may be obtained where the manufacture of gas is carried on; while carbolic, although certainly more of a monopoly, is manufactured on a large scale in various parts of the kingdom, and can be procured from any druggists."

NATURE'S METHOD.—W. L. Curtiss says, in the New York Times: Fifty years ago my employer one day remarked to me, "The idea of not plowing under the manure—preposterous! Why, go into the orchard and examine the droppings of the cattle, and that which has been exposed to the hot sun for a week will be as dry as a chip and burn like one." The belief was that it was valueless and all manure upon the surface must be affected in the same way. When the books and all the live farmers said. Plow in the manure, and that in a thorough manner. I of course thought that must be the right way. I became owner of a farm afterward, and started in and for some years followed this course and one spring after the sowing and planting was done I told the boys to clean out one of my cattle sheds where sleds, etc., had been stored, but where some manure and litter had accumulated. They did so, and when the wagon was loaded up, "Where shall we put it?" Sure enough, where put it? The plowed ground was all in crops, and it was too late to drop it on the meadows, and I finally told them to go to the cornfield and spread it evenly on a certain sandy knoll containing about six square rods, upon which little or nothing ever grew. They did so, and the corn was soon up and the small cultivator going in the field, but that particular spot soon got ahead of all the rest and was ahead when ripe, and a good way ahead, too. I cut up the corn and sowed the field to wheat, seeding with red clover, and the wheat and clover there was as far ahead of the rest of the field as had been the corn, and kept its own from that time on. With this little problem before me I went to experimenting and from that time forward I plowed under no more manure except green clover and for experiment. Brother farmers, prepare your manure well and mix thoroughly with the soil after plowing, and give surface manuring a fair test by the side of both deep and shallow plowing in, and know for yourselves. I think well of the practice of hauling crude manure out in winter direct from the stables. The rains, frosts and snow will take good care of it, but the finer crude or other manure is made the better.

TO REMOVE grease spots from boys' and men's clothing, particularly, an excellent mixture is made of four parts of alcohol to one part of ammonia. Apply the liquid to the grease spot and rub diligently with a sponge and clean water. The chemistry of the operation seems to be that the alcohol and the ether dissolve the grease, and the ammonia forms a soap with it, which is washed out by water. The result is much more satisfactory than when something is used which only seems to spread the spot and make it fainter, but does not actually remove it. If oil is spilled on the carpet and you immediately put or scatter cornmeal over it, the oil will be absorbed by it. Oil may also be removed from carpet upon which you do not dare put ether or ammonia by tying thick blotting paper over it and pressing a hot flat-iron on it. Repeat the operation several times, using a clean paper each time.

IT IS estimated that the gold dollar is used by 60,000,000 of people, the British sovereign by 35,000,000, the French franc by 77,000,000, the silver dollars of all countries by about 552,000,000.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

THE LATEST AUTOMATON.

A recent news letter from Vienna says: Two months ago an automaton called King Fu, was exhibited for the first time in Vienna and caused a great excitement. The automaton, as also the stool upon which it was seated, were too small to admit of the possibility of concealing any person who might be in them. Besides, the stool was of glass, and disclosed the most complicated machinery, consisting of wheels of all kinds and dimensions, and springs and chains. The machinery was wound up at the beginning of each performance, and was then able to answer any question in arithmetic put to it by the spectators. The exhibitor, Herr Rosen, was offered money by members of the aristocracy to disclose his secret, but he refused point blank. When the whole city had gone to see King-Fu, the court's curiosity was roused, and the Emperor had M. Rosen called to perform one evening before himself, the Empress and the little Princess Valerie. The automaton solved all the problems put to it, and, when the performance was over, the Empress said to Rosen: "Now, you will not mind telling us the secret of your King-Fu?" But Rosen did mind. The next day he quarreled with his servant, who, being dismissed, betrayed his former master, and he told a dreadful story of a young man who was concealed within King-Fu, and who suffered horrible agonies during each preformance. The police intervened, and found that there certainly was a boy (Rosen's own nephew) inside King-Fu, but that he was, all things considered, pretty comfortable, and certainly suffered no agony. The papers got wind of the affair, and Rosen announced his departure from Vienna. But justice, in the shape of the police, stopped him, and actually put him in prison on the charge that he had cheated the public out of 20,000 florins. After five days of detention M. Rosen was liberated, there being no real charge against him. The public, though duped, was entirely on M. Rosen's side. Those who believed that a machine, once wound up, could answer multitudinous questions must have believed in a miracle; and those who did not believe it must have tacitly known that they were being deceived in some manner. When M. Rosen complained of having spent a week in prison, he was answered that he certainly deserved some punishment for cheating the "very highest court of Europe" into believing—what? He packed King-Fu up, and left Vienna, with 20,000 florins, his nephew, and his automaton.

Machines are now made which will cut from a roll of wire pieces of the right length, head them, point them, polish them, sort them out with the points all one way and stick them into paper or rolls faster than one can count.

Upwards of 13,000,000 letters and postcards are posted daily in the world; 3,318,000,000 letters are annually distributed in Europe, 1,250,000,000 in America, 76,000,000 in Asia, 36,000,000 in Australia and 11,000,000 in Africa.

INSECT REMEDIES.—As timely to the advent of the insect crops we present the following remedies, most of which we have tried and found efficacious:

For the striped cucumber bug, so destructive to melon, squash and cucumber vines, light sprinklings of fine soot daily from the fire place and hand picking. The bug will be found secreted under the clods, and also near vines in in the day time and may be crushed between the fingers. Fresh gas house lime scattered around the hills and helps to keep them off. It should not be put upon the plants.

For the little flee beetle on cabbage and tobacco plant use soot as above, or fish brine sprinkled over the plants. Also plaster and phosphate.

For the cabbage worm, or larvæ of the cabbage butterfly, soot, cayenne pepper, copperas water, salt, plaster and incessant hand picking. Also a ruthlesss war on the butterflies. This pest is fearfully on the increase in our midst and calls for stringent preventative or exterminating measures.

For the Colorado beetle, another very troublesome insect, London Purple, Paris green, both with caution and after every rain. Ceaseless hand picking is often the best remedy.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.—A remedy for fleas is to place a handful of tobacco stems in the place where the dog or horse sleeps, or a leaf or two of the same weed will rid a setting hen of her pests.

If a teasponful of powdered borax is added to every pint of starch used in starching cotton goods, they can not be made to burn or blaze. The borax can have no injurious effect upon the cloth or upon the wearer, and is so cheap that every one can afford it.

Glass is a very poor conductor of heat and a very large amount is broken by immersion in very hot water, or by pouring hot water upon it, while lamp chimneys suddenly snap only too often if the light is turned quickly up. In washing glass tepid water should be used first, and hot water added by degrees; and the flame of the lamp slowly turned up.

FASTING IN ACUTE RHEUMATISM.—Dr. Wood, professor of chemisty in the Medical Department of Bishop's College, Montreal, reports in the Canada Medical Record a number of cases in which acute articular rheumatism was cured by fasting, usually from four to eight days. In no case was it necessary to fast more than ten days. Less positive results were obtained in cases of chronic rheumatism. The patient was allowed to drink freely of cold water or lemonade in moderate quantities it they preferred. No medicines were given. Dr. Wood says that from the quick and almost invarinbly good results obtained by simple abstinence from more than forty cases in his own practice he is inclined to believe that rheumatism is, after all, only a phaze of indigestion, to be cured by giving complete and continued rest to all viscera.

BAKED EGGS are sometimes relished by those who find fried ones greasy and indigestible. Butter a deep earthern pie plate, then put in the eggs, taking care not to break the yolks of any; put a little lump of butter on each egg and a little pepper and salt, too. If the oven is hot, the eggs will be cooked sufficiently in four minutes. As soon as the whites are firmly set they are done.
